Administrative Map of Spain

Linguistic Map of Spain

Introduction

Published in compliance with Resolution 4 (IV/4) on the Standardization of Geographical Names (Geneva, 1982) passed by the Fourth United Nations Conference whereby all countries are recommended to publish toponymic guidelines for map and other editors for international use. The purpose is to facilitate the understanding of issues posed by toponymy and the interpretation of maps by cartographers and users of geographical names from other countries. The abovestated resolution describes the basic content of these toponymic guidelines, including the main aspects affecting geographical names, such as linguistic, administrative and legal ones, in addition to competent authorities and national mapping sources.

Coordination and collaboration among the different competent authorities on geographical names in Spain was possible through the High Geographic Council's Committee Specialised in Geographical Names.

Languages

1.1. General remarks

The official language of Spain, and common throughout the territory, is Castilian or Spanish (synonyms) coexisting in specific Autonomous Communities with other co-official languages, with different situations and levels of bilingualism.

1.2. Official languages of Spain: Legal situation and implementation in official maps

Official languages in Spain:

- Spanish or Castilian, official language of the country and whose official recognition is shared with the language of specific Autonomous Communities;
- Galician in the Galicia (Autonomous Community of Galicia);
- Basque in the País Vasco/Euskadi (Autonomous Community of the Basque Country/Euskadi) and the North of the Comunidad Foral de Navarra (Foral Community of Navarre);
- Catalan in the Cataluña/Catalunya (Autonomous Community of Catalonia/Catalunya), Illes Balears (Balearic Islands) and the Comunitat Valenciana (Valencian Community), where it is officially called Valencian;
- Aranese in the Val d’Aran (Cataluña/Catalunya) (Catalonia/Catalunya), also co-official with Catalan.

Regional borders do not always match linguistic borders. Only in three of the six bilingual Communities (Galicia (Galicia), Cataluña/Catalunya (Catalonia/Catalunya) and Illes Balears (Balearic Islands)) does the local language expand consistently throughout the territory –even if not the mother tongue of all its inhabitants–; whereas in Navarre and Valencia there are two well-differentiated areas where each of the official languages prevail. In turn, sometimes co-official languages penetrate into the surrounding Spanish-speaking Communities.

Spain's linguistic plurality is not restricted to officially recognised languages. Instead, it is expanded through dialects and other non-official languages. Bable or Asturian are worth noting -with a legally established usage in the Asturias (Principality of Asturias)- as well as Leonese and Aragonese in some specific areas of Castilla y León (Autonomous Community of Castile and Leon) and Aragón (Aragon), respectively. On the other hand, the so-called Southern traits should also be noted, characterised by strong phonetic features typical of the dialectic varieties of the Spanish language in the South of Spain: Extremaduran, Andalusian, Murcian and Canarian.

Except for the Basque language, whose origin is yet to be established, the languages in Spain belong to the Romance group within the family of Indo-European languages, resulting from the various evolutions of Vulgar Latin.

The official mapping of the country and the Autonomous Communities includes the forms of toponyms in languages and dialects recognised by the corresponding Public Administrations.

1.2.1. The Spanish language

Spanish is the most widespread name, while the synonym Castilian is mainly used to distinguish it from the other official languages in the country.

1.2.1.1. The Spanish language alphabet

According to the Royal Academy of the Spanish Language, the Latin-based Spanish alphabet consists of 29 letters, whose forms and names are listed below:

A a (a)	B b (be)	C c (ce)	CH ch (che)
D d (de)	E e (e)	F f (efe)	G g (ge)
H h (hache)	I i (i)	J j (jota)	K k (ka)
L l (ele)	LL ll (elle)	M m (eme)	N n (ene)
Ñ ñ (eñe)	O o (o)	P p (pi)	Q q (cu)
R r (erre)	S s (ese)	T t (te)	U u (u)
V v (uve)	W w (uve doble)	X x (equis)	Y y (i griega)
Z z (zeta)

The Royal Academy of the Spanish Language recommends including the letters ch and ll in the alphabet between the letters c and l, respectively.

Each letter of the Spanish alphabet does not always correspond to a single sound, nor are all the sounds written with a single letter. In other words, there is not always a univocal relationship between pronunciation and orthography.

- Sounds represented by two letters, digraphs like ch, ll, rr, and the qu, gu groups (before the e, í vowels).
- Letters used to represent more than one phoneme: c, g, r, y, w.
- Phonemes that may be represented by different letters: b, v, w; c, k, qu; g, j; i, y; u, w.
- Letters representing two sounds, such as x [ks].
- Letters with no phonic value, such as h.

1.2.1.2. Pronunciation of the Spanish language

The first column includes the letters of the alphabet, compound letters and digraphs; the second column, the pronunciation through the transcription into the International Phonetic Alphabet (IPA); the third column, the graphic forms represented by the phonemes in orthography with their position; and the last column, examples of toponyms with the described pronunciation.

1.2.2. The Galician language

The Galician language is called galego in this language.

1.2.2.1. The Galician language alphabet

The Latin-based Galician alphabet consists of 23 letters, whose forms and names in Galician are listed below:

A a (a)	B b (be)	C c (ce)	D d (de)
E e (e)	F f (efe)	G g (ge)	H h (hache)
I i (i)	L l (ele)	M m (eme)	N n (ene)
Ñ ñ (eñe)	O o (o)	P p (p)	Q q (cu)
R r (erre)	S s (ese)	T t (te)	U u (u)
V v (uve)	X x (ex)	Z z (zeta)

The letters of the Galician alphabet do not always have a single sound, nor are all the sounds made with a single letter. Modern Galician spelling uses the following digraphs, representing a single phoneme:

Digraph	Name
ch	ce hache
Gu	gue u
Li	ele dobre
Nh	ene hache
Qu	que u
Rr	erre dobre

1.2.2.2. Pronunciation of the Galician language

The first column includes the letters of the alphabet, compound letters and digraphs; the second column, the pronunciation through the transcription into the International Phonetic Alphabet (IPA); the third column, the graphic forms represented by the phonemes in orthography with their position; and the last column, examples of toponyms with the described pronunciation.

Galician: letters and digraphs	Pronunciation International Phonetic Alphabet	Graphic form and position	Examples of toponyms

1.2.3. The Basque language

Basque is the traditional name given to this language, which can be found in Spanish as eusquera, vasco, vascuence and euskera, a widely used form in both languages. It is the only non Romance language of the Iberian Peninsula. It does not belong to other branches of the Indo-European languages family either, or any other known family. It is, thus, an isolated language of unknown origin.

1.2.3.1. The Basque language alphabet

The Latin-based Basque alphabet consists of 27 letters, whose forms and names in Basque are listed below:

A a (a)	B b (be)	C c (ce)	D d (de)
E e (e)	F f (efe)	G g (ge)	H h (hatxe)
I i (i)	J j (jota)	K k (ka)	L l (ele)
M m (eme)	N n (ene)	Ñ ñ (eñe)	O o (o)
P p (p)	Q q (ku)	R r (ere, erre)	S s (ese)
T t (te)	U u (u)	V v (uve)	W w (uve bikoitza)
X x (ixa)	Y y (i grekoia)	Z z (zeta)

Out of the aforementioned letters, the following do not belong to the language and are only used in words or names from other languages: c, q, v, y, w. In almost all cases, each of the letters of the Basque alphabet corresponds to a single sound, although some sounds are transcribed with more than one letter. In other words, there are phonemes consisting of two letters, digraphs, such as dd, ll, rr, ts, tt, tx and tz. The Royal Academy of the Basque Language (Euskaltzaindia) recommends including these groups in the alphabet in the corresponding letters.

The Basque alphabet is practically phonological so that, except for the digraphs, each letter represents a sound. Some dialectal regions may present pronunciations other than standard ones.

1.2.3.2. Pronunciation of the Basque language

The first column includes the letters of the alphabet, compound letters and digraphs; the second column, the pronunciation through the transcription into the International Phonetic Alphabet (IPA); the third column, the graphic forms represented by the phonemes in orthography with their position; and the last column, examples of toponyms with the described pronunciation.

1.2.4. The Catalan and Valencian languages

The name Catalan –català in this language– is the one used in the Autonomous Communities of Cataluña/Catalunya (Catalonia/Catalunya) and the Illes Balears (Balearic Islands), whereas Valencian –valencià in this language– is the one used in the Comunitat Valenciana (Valencian Community).

1.2.4.1. The Catalan and Valencian alphabet

The Latin-based alphabet consists of 26 simple letters, with the following names in this language:

A a (a)	B b (be)	C c (ce)	D d (de)
E e (e)	F f (efa, efe)	G g (ge)	H h (hac)
I i (i)	J j (jota)	K k (ca)	L l (ela, ele)
M m (ema, eme)	N n (ena, ene)	O o (o)	P p (p)
Q q (ccu)	R r (erra, erre)	S s (essa, esse)	T t (te)
U u (u)	V v (uve)	W w (ve doble)	X x (ics, xeix)
Y y (i grega)	Z z (zeta)

In addition to simple letters, there are a number of two-letter combinations, called digraphs, representing a single consonant sound: gu, ig (following stressed vowel other than í), ll, ny, qu, rr, ss, tg, tj, tx, tz.

Combinations represented by two consonants or a geminate consonant are not considered digraphs, but compound letters, even if they can be pronounced as simple consonants: mm, nn, tl, tll, tm, tn, l·l.

Apostrophe

The apostrophe (') is an orthographic marker used to represent the elision of the vowel of the singular definite article (both the general el, la and the so-called salat es, sa), of the personal article (en, na) and the preposition before a word starting with h or vowel: l'arbre, l'herba, n'Emili, d'hora (except for the articles la and sa before words starting with unstressed i or u: la universitat).

1.2.4.2. Pronunciation of the Catalan and Valencian languages

The first column includes the letters of the alphabet, compound letters and digraphs; the second column, the pronunciation through the transcription into the International Phonetic Alphabet (IPA); the third column, the graphic forms represented by the phonemes in orthography with their position; and the last column, examples of toponyms with the described pronunciation.

1.3. Useful spelling notes for the understanding of geographical names in official maps

A more thorough explanation on the treatment of toponymy and the rules of spelling used in the National Geographic Institute's National Topographic Map at 1:25:000 scale (MTN25) can be found in the publication entitled Toponimia: Normas para el MTN25. Conceptos básicos y terminología. Instituto Geográfico Nacional, 2005 (www.ign.es).

1.3.1. Capitalisation

The same criteria used for capitalisation in the different linguistic areas are applied in the MTN25 for map consistency purposes.

- Initial position

The general rule is to capitalise all the words starting a title or heading, irrespective of the grammatical category.

Examples: La Hoya, Tres Hitos, Carra la Vega, Tras la Sierra.

- In other maps with Catalan or Valencian toponymy, the article is always written with initial lower case.
Examples: la Bisbal, la Vila Joiosa.

– Intermediate position

All nouns, adjectives, adverbs, verbs and numeral adjectives are capitalised.
Examples: Loma de la Umbría, Peña Bermeja, Puebla de Abajo, Arroyo de Lejos Lobos, Pinar de Dos Hermanas.

Articles, prepositions, pronouns and conjunctions take lower case.
Examples: Cabezo de la Era, Ladera tras la Fuente, Lomo de entre los Prados, Vereda de Marigarcía y Suertes Nuevas. Torre d'en Doménec, Sant Vicent del Raspeig.

The only exception to this rule are official administrative agencies registered with intermediate upper case article or connective.

Examples: San Lorenzo de El Escorial, San Cristóbal de La Laguna.

- In other maps, with Basque toponymy, the rule is to write all words in intermediate position in lower case.
Examples: Nerbioi ibaia, Bizkaiko golkoa, Urkaregi mendatea.

The exceptions to this rule of the Basque language are specific terms, such as hagionyms or names of saints, specific two-word compound names (Uharte Arakil) and street names where only the generic name is in lower case.

Examples: San Adrian, San Roke, Berrio-Aldape, Amorebieta-Zornotza, Aguirre Lehendakariaren kalea.

1.3.2. Slash and bilingual toponyms

The slash (/) is used in the MTN25 for bilingual toponyms, which have a name in two languages.

The Local Institutions Register (Registro de Entidades Locales – REL, in Spanish) has adopted the use of the slash to separate the two forms of a bilingual name. The slash indicates that the two names are official and could be indistinctly used according to the linguistic context.

Examples: Donostia/San Sebastián, Alicante/Alacant, Almazora/Almassora.

In the case of the minor toponymy, the slash is used in the MTN25 in the following cases:

- a) Toponyms from an Autonomous Community with minor toponymy standardized in two languages: these are bilingual toponyms and, thus, their names are separated by slash.

Examples: Ría de Orio/Orioko Itsasadarra, Río Nervión/Nerbioi Ibaia.

- b) Specific toponyms located between two Autonomous Communities with different languages, with a name in each of them: they are also written as bilingual toponyms, including the form in Spanish first.

Examples: Pico de la Tallada/Tuc Feixan, Puerto de Orduña/Urduñako Mendalea.

- c) Important linear toponyms belonging to two Autonomous Communities with different languages, with monolingual name in the language of each of these Communities: they are written with the Spanish form throughout the Castilian monolingual Autonomous Community and as bilingual toponym in the Autonomous Community with a language other than Spanish, including the Spanish form first.

Example: Río Júcar (Albacete)

Río Júcar/Riu Xúquer (Comunitat Valenciana).

The Royal Academy of the Basque Language (Euskaltzaindia) has standardized the use of the slash to separate the names in another language.

1.3.3. Hyphen

The hyphen (-) is used to join elements that form a compound toponym. It normally carries a linking value similar to that of a preposition or conjunction. It is sometimes used for the names of city councils created by the union of two or more entities. In the case of toponyms in Spanish, the initial following the hyphen is always capitalised.

Examples: Robleda-Cervantes, Gernika-Lumo.

In Catalan and Valencian, the hyphen is sometimes used to separate different elements of a compound word, in order to facilitate understanding and pronunciation. The initial letter of the word following the hyphen takes lower case.

Examples: Riba-roja de Túria, Bell-lloc, Vilar-roig, Font-rubí.

The hyphen is also used as connecting element in the name of specific geographical elements expressing directional or situational reference, though only in well-founded cases. In these names, in all the official languages of Spain, the second element is capitalised.

Examples: Acueducto Tajo-Segura, Estación de Archena-Fortuna, Transvassament Xúquer-Vinalopó.

In Galician, groups with compound names have been standardized without hyphen in the Gazetteer of population groups, including cases that have traditionally used it.

Examples: Castro Caldelas, Ponte Caldelas.

1.3.4. Parenthesis

In the MTN25 toponomy, the parenthesis () is used in the following cases:

- a) To specify something regarding a given mapped element when there is no available symbol to represent said information.

Examples: Minas de Cubillo, Molino de la Hoz.
(abandonadas) deserted (ruinas) ruins

- b) To indicate the name of the saint that gives the name to a church in Galicia and Asturias.

Examples: Salvaterra, Celeiros.
(San Lourenzo) (San Martiño)

- c) Exceptionally, to indicate the name of the municipality when it is different and more renowned than that of its capital, which is frequent in Galicia.

Example: O Castelo.
(Salvaterra de Miño)

- d) When it is part of the official name of an administrative entity, which is very rare.

Example: Noáin (Valle de Elorz) / Noain (Elortzibar).

- In other maps, with Basque toponymy, the parenthesis may also be used temporarily in the following cases:
- When there is an incorrect but widely known term.
Example: Beratza (San Pedro).
 - In the case of population groups to indicate the municipality to which they belong.
Example: Aretxabaleta (Gasteiz).

1.3.5. Conjunction

The use of the disjunction o (or) in Spanish, and its equivalents in the other official languages, is normally limited to those toponyms with two names recognised in the same language.

Examples: Playa del Castillo o de la Duquesa, Cabo de las Huertas o del Alcodre, Val de Monterrei ou de Verín.

The coordinating conjunction y (and) in Spanish, and its equivalents in the other official languages, is rarely used. It is sometimes included in the name of an administrative entity, formed by the annexation of two entities.

Examples: Bedmar y Garcíez, Fumaces e A Trepá, Rupit i Pruit, Vielha e Mijaran.

Summary of conjunctions used in maps:

- Spanish:
 - Coordinating conjunction: y (e when the following word starts with i or h).
 - Disjunction: o.
- Galician:
 - Coordinating conjunction: e.
 - Disjunction: ou.
- Basque:
 - Coordinating conjunction: eta.
 - Disjunction: edo.

- Catalan and Valencian:
 - Coordinating conjunction: i.
 - Disjunction: o.
- Aranese:
 - Coordinating conjunction: e.

1.3.6. Article

Grammatically speaking, the article is used to define the extension of the common names that follow, indicating something specific and known.

In toponymy, it is more frequently used in simple toponyms, consisting of a single name, rather than in compound toponyms.

Examples: El Prado, Cueva Valiente, Los Arenales, Arenales de San Pedro, La Bisbal, La Muga.

When the article el (the) in Spanish, or its equivalents in the other languages in Spain, follows a preposition, a contraction is the general rule.

Examples: Ladera del Mulhacén, Valle del Tiétar, Camino al Olivar, Embalse del Atazar, Ría da Coruña, Montes do Castelo.

In Basque, the article -a follows the name, though it should be eliminated in certain examples in the case of declension: Abaurregainea, Abaurregainean, Abaurregaineko.

In the lists of geographical names when the final -a is the article, it is indicated between parenthesis: (-a) singular and (-ak) plural.

Examples: Bortziriak (-ak), Busturia (-a).

Summary of articles used in maps:

- Spanish:
 - Singular masculine definite article: el.
 - Contracted with prepositions a and de, forming al and del.
 - Singular feminine definite article: la.

- Galician:
 - Singular masculine definite article: o.
 - Contracted with the preposition de, forming do.
 - Singular feminine definite article: a.
 - Contracted with the preposition de, forming da.
- Basque:
 - Singular definite article: -a.
 - Plural definite article: -ak.
- Catalan and Valencian:
 - Singular masculine definite article: el, l' (and the forms es, s', lo).
 - Contracted with the prepositions a, de and per, if not apostrophised to the following word: al camí, a l'oratori; del camí, de l'oratori; pel camí, per l'oratori.
 - Singular feminine definite article: la, l' (and the form sa, s').
 - Plural masculine definite article: els (and the forms es, los).
 - Contracted with the prepositions a, de and per: als camins; dels camíns; pels camins.
 - Plural feminine definite article: les (and the form ses).

1.3.7. Agglutination

Agglutination is the union of two or more elements to form a single and new lexical unit. Compound toponyms are very frequent in toponymy due to historical phonetic processes.

Examples: Carra Aguilar > Carraguilar,
Fuente del Pino > Fuentelpino,
Peña Alba > Peñalba.

There are several compound toponyms, consisting of the union of two elements that may be used separately in the common language.

The composition may be the result of the agglutination of:

- Generic name + adjective: Fuentesverdes, Navahondilla, Monteagudo.
- Generic name + name: Fuentelcésped, Navacolores, Fuendetodos, Valdelagua.

- Two anthroponyms: Hernansancho, Muñopepe, Pedroinés.
- Adverbial and prepositional phrases: Pradoamedias, Nava de Amedias, Entrambasmestas.
- Verbal forms: Aguallevaos, Cortijo de Salsipuedes, Cuesta de Mataburros.

In general, agglutinations in toponymy are written in the map following tradition and based on the following criteria:

- a) Respecting the agglutination in its traditional form, whether with complete components or with the elimination of part of them.

Examples: Campoalbillo, Campalbo, Monteagudo, Castillonuevo, Castilnuevo, Castilblanco Majadahonda, Majadaloba, Majaerrayo, Majalahita.

- b) Spell checking the new agglutinated term following the orthographic rules of the corresponding language.

Examples: Ciempozuelos, Entrambosrios, Entrerrios, Fuentesecas, Trasierra, Barcohondo.

1.3.8. Preposition «de»

The preposition «de» is frequently used to link the components of a toponym, whether generic and specific terms or two specific terms (Arroyo del Cervunal, Gumiel de Izán). The second element of the toponym is introduced through this preposition, which may indicate location, belonging, or a specification of the first, especially when there are other homonymous toponyms (Molina de Aragón, Molina de Segura), to facilitate their identification.

The use of the preposition «de» is also very frequent to make the toponym more comprehensive, highlighting the proper name.

In short, the preposition «de» may have the following functions:

- a) Establish a relationship between the terms of the toponym such as:

- Possession or belonging.

Examples: Casa de los Gómez, Convento de Santo Tomás.

- Geographical location.

Examples: Golfo de Cádiz, Alhama de Granada.

- Origin or destination.

Example: Camino de Bustarviejo.

- A characteristic or specification.

Examples: Fuente de la Teja, Laguna del Saladar.

- b) Link the generic and specific terms without indicating any relationship, simply for the sake of expression.

Examples: Picos de Urbión, Sierra de Gredos, Isla de Alegranza.

In Basque, the apposition is used instead of the preposition.

Examples: Uharte Arakil, Etxarri Etxauribar, Ibiriku Deierri.

Standardization, competence and authorities in geographical names in Spain

2.1. Responsibilities, functions and procedures for standardization

Competence on geographical names in Spain is distributed among the different Administrations: the National Geographical Institute and other government agencies, the Autonomous Communities and the Local Administration. The Committee Specialised in Geographical Names and the Local Institutions Register are also involved.

2.1.1. Government Agencies

2.1.1.1. National Geographical Institute

The National Geographical Institute of the Ministry of Development has competence over geographical names, as set forth in Royal Decree 1545/2007 regulating the National Mapping System. Such powers are as follows:

- Definition of toponymy affecting more than one Autonomous Community, following a report by the Committee Specialised in Geographical Names.
- Standardization and dissemination of official toponymy in coordination with competent agencies.
- Creation and approval of the Basic Geographical Gazetteer of Spain, based on cartography 1:25.000 (or lower scales) and including the official names of the Local Institutions Register, and official names standardized by competent Public Administrations.
- Creation of the toponymy databases corresponding to the National Topographic Map, together with its standardization criteria.
- Registration of the National Geographical Gazetteer and collection, standardization and dissemination of official toponymy.

2.1.1.2. Other Agencies

Some government agencies are entitled to define the official name of geographical entities of general interest under their scope, such as AENA (Spanish Airports and Air Navigation), National Ports Authority, National Parks Authority, Adif (Administrator of Railway Infrastructure).

2.1.2. Autonomous Communities

The competence of the Autonomous Communities is consistent with that of the Regional Governments, Inter-island Councils, Councils of the Islands and City Councils.

All Autonomous Communities are legally entitled to establish the official name of basic local entities (see 2.1.5). To become official, these names should be registered before the Local Institutions Register of the Ministry of Public Administrations. Changes to the names of provinces and Autonomous Communities, proposed by the latter, should be approved by the Spanish Parliament.

In addition, Autonomous Communities can establish and modify the names of geographical elements under their ownership and control (cultural heritage, protected natural areas, autonomous seaports, etc.).

As to minor toponymy (mountain ranges, peaks, spots, rivers, springs, etc.), the Autonomous Communities currently with competence over its standardization are: Galicia (Galicia), Principado de Asturias (Principality of Asturias), País Vasco/Euskadi, (Basque Country/Euskadi), Comunidad Foral de Navarra (Foral Community of Navarre), Cataluña/Catalunya (Catalonia/Catalunya), Comunitat Valenciana (Valencian Community), Illes Balears (Balearic Islands) and Andalucía (Andalusia).

2.1.3. Local Administration

The Local Administration –City Councils of municipalities– is the basic authority that defines its own name, that of the population groups within its jurisdiction and its urban streets.

2.1.4. Committee Specialised in Geographical Names

The Committee Specialised in Geographical Names (Comisión Especializada de Nombres Geográficos - CENG, in Spanish) is part of the High Geographical Council –management body of the National Mapping System— reporting to the Ministry of Development and performing advisory and planning functions for geographic information and official mapping.

The CENG is the High Geographical Council's agency conducting studies and making proposals to prepare decisions on issues related to geographical names. Its functions and responsibilities are established by Royal Decree 1545/2007.

The CENG includes representatives from authorities responsible for geographical names from the General Government Administration and the Autonomous Communities, as well as from universities, academies of languages and other toponymy-related institutions.

The main objectives are to promote toponymy standardization in Spain in coordination with competent agencies and promote the knowledge of geographical names, their standardized use and their value as cultural heritage.

2.1.5. Local Institutions Register

The Local Institutions Register of the Ministry of Public Administrations (created by Royal Decree 382/1986) encompasses the official names, approved by the relevant Autonomous Communities, of all the basic local entities in Spain and its capitals:

- Provinces.
- Municipalities.
- Islands (with administrative competence).
- LTEBM (Local Territorial Entities Below Municipality).

- Regions (with administrative competence).
- Other municipal clusters.

Source material for geographical names

The main source material for geographical names includes: maps, geographical gazetteers and the Spatial Data Infrastructures (Infraestructuras de Datos Espaciales-IDE, in Spanish).

The National Geographical Institute (Instituto Geográfico Nacional-IGN, in Spanish) is the government's agency responsible for the official mapping and the Basic Geographical Gazetteer of Spain. In addition, it is also in charge of creating and maintaining the National Portal for the Spatial Data Infrastructure of Spain (Infraestructura de Datos Espaciales de España-IDEE, in Spanish).

The Autonomous Communities are responsible for creating the specific geographical gazetteers that make up, together with the Basic Geographical Gazetteer of Spain (Nomenclador Geográfico Básico de España-NGBE, in Spanish), the National Geographical Gazetteer.

They are also in charge of creating maps for their territories and contributing to the IDEE, when applicable.

To access the IGN maps herein described, please visit <http://www.ign.es>. Some are available for sale online at <http://www.cnig.es/>.

3.1. National Topographic Map

The National Topographic Map is the basic set of the official mapping of Spain. This map consists in a standard and continuous vector digital database of the entire national territory. It includes the following: physical geography (relief, hydrography and land use) and human geography (population centres and buildings, natural resources and industry, roads, administrative divisions and geodesic support, toponymy and labelling). The following maps are available:

- National Topographic Map at 1:25.000 scale (MTN25)
- National Topographic Map at 1:50.000 scale (MTN50)

3.2. Derived maps

Derived mapping is the result of addition or generalisation processes from the basic mapping. The IGN designs the derived maps covering the entire national territory, at scales below 1:50.000.

- Provincial Maps at 1:200.000 scale
- Autonomous Maps at 1:200.000 to 1:400.000 scales
- Map of Spain at 1:500.000 scale
- Iberian Peninsula, Balearic and Canary Islands at 1: 1.000.000
- Spain, the Autonomous State, at 1:2.000.000 scale

3.3. Cartographic databases with geographical names

A cartographic database is the set of geographical data including all the information cartographically represented in maps (except for crops and vegetation), structured in such a way to be input in a GIS. The cartographic databases prepared from the set of IGN maps are the following:

- Numerical Cartographic Database 1:200.000 (BCN200)
- Numerical Cartographic Database 1:25.000 (BCN25)
- National Topographic Database 1:25.000 (BTN25)
- Border Lines Database 1:25.000, 1:200.000, 1:1 000.000

3.4. Gazetteers containing official geographical names

The National Geographical Gazetteer, which should include official toponyms, should consist of the National Geographical Institute's Basic Geographical Gazetteer and the Geographical Gazetteer of each Autonomous Community. The Concise Gazetteer, as a first step in the creation of the Basic Gazetteer of Spain, has been designed by the National Geographical Institute. The following official gazetteers are available online:

- Concise Geographical Gazetteer of Spain (<http://www.ign.es>)
- Official Gazetteer of Major Toponymy of Catalonia (<http://www.gencat.net/toponimia>)

- Nomenclátor de Galicia (topónimos oficiales de unidades administrativas y poblaciones) (<http://www.xunta.es/toponimia>)
- Nomenclátor de Navarra (<http://www.cfnavarra.es/estadistica>)

3.5. Infraestructura de Información Geográfica de España o Infraestructura de Datos Espaciales de España

La Infraestructura de Información Geográfica de España, también denominada Datos Espaciales de España (IDEE), está constituida por el conjunto de infraestructuras de información geográfica y servicios interoperables de información geográfica relativos a la información geográfica, generada o bajo responsabilidad de las Administraciones Públicas, disponible sobre el territorio nacional, el mar territorial, la zona contigua, la plataforma continental y la zona económica exclusiva

El acceso a los datos georreferenciados y servicios interoperables de información geográfica se hace a través de geoportales. De ellos cabe destacar el geoportal IDEE (www.idee.es) que debe permitir acceder a todos los servicios interoperables de información geográfica establecidos por las Administraciones Públicas españolas

A través del geoportal IDEE (www.idee.es) se ofrecen varias aplicaciones estándar e interoperables, que incluyen un visualizador de información geográfica, que permite componer mapas superponiendo información de diferentes proveedores procedentes de la Administración General del Estado, Administraciones Autonómicas y Locales así como Universidades y empresas privadas. También hay disponible un catálogo de datos y servicios, para obtener información sobre datos y servicios geográficos que se producen en España, la posibilidad de descargar datos geográficos, y un buscador de nombres geográficos, que facilita la búsqueda de topónimos georreferenciados que se encuentran cargados en la Base de Datos de Topónimos del Instituto Geográfico Nacional y del Nomenclátor Geográfico Conciso de España, permitiendo la visualización del entorno geográfico del topónimo, utilizando por defecto la cartografía proporcionada por el Instituto Geográfico Nacional.

List of general and descriptive terms necessary for the understanding of maps in the official languages of Spain

Toponyms frequently consist of a generic term indicating the geographical element's nature or type of entity and a specific term or proper name specifying it. Generic terms are part of the common lexicon and their meaning is based on their origin. With time, this meaning sometimes does no longer match reality, and some others it reflects a still lasting environment, especially in the case of toponyms related to the relief or hydrographic phenomena.

A descriptive term is not a toponym but a cartographic note used to name a geographical element without a proper name or specific symbol.

Example: Silo (silo), Mina de carbón (coal mine).

Below is a list of the most frequent generic and descriptive terms included in the IGN MTN25 in the official languages of Spain.

Administrative divisions of Spain

Administratively speaking, Spain is divided into Autonomous Communities, Provinces and Municipalities. Each autonomous community comprises one or more provinces, which are in turn divided into municipalities and grouped into islands in the case of the the Balearic and Canary archipelagos. Finally, it should be noted that the cities of Ceuta and Melilla hold statute of autonomy.

The remaining administrative divisions are of lower rank: entities depending on the municipality (so-called EATIM) and municipality clusters created to improve the management of specific services, such as counties, communities or specific metropolitan areas.

Municipalities are the basic local entities of the State's territory organisation and direct channels for citizen participation in public affairs.

In short, Spain's basic administrative structure is as follows:

- 17 Autonomous Communities
- 2 Cities with Statute of Autonomy
- 50 Provinces
- Grouping of municipalities for State administration
- 8,116 Municipalities: State's basic territorial demarcation

MAPA DE LA DIVISIÓN ADMINISTRATIVA DE ESPAÑA

Official languages of Spain:

- Spanish or Castilian, official language of the country and its entire territory.
- Galician in Galicia.
- Basque or Eusquera in the País Vasco/Euskadi (Basque Country/Euskadi) and the North-western triangle of Navarra.
- Catalan in Cataluña/Catalunya (Catalonia/Catalunya), the Illes Balears (Balearic Islands) and the Comunitat Valenciana (Valencian Community), where it is officially called Valencian.

- Aranese in the Val d'Aran (Cataluña/Catalunya) (Catalonia/Catalunya), also co-official with Catalan.

Spain's linguistic plurality is not restricted to officially recognised languages. Instead, it is further expanded by other languages and dialects such as Asturian, Leonese and Aragonese.

The so-called Southern traits are characterised by strong phonetic features typical of the dialectic varieties of the Spanish language in the South of Spain: Extremaduran, Andalusian, Murcian and Canarian.
